

1. set your bucket at a safe and level working height.
2. Slide each fork's wedged area onto the cutting edge of your bucket
3. carefully wrap the chain around the back side of your bucket and over the top of the front. You may want to have an assistant help during this process.
4. use your binder and attach one end to the chain and the other to the top hole in the wedged area as shown in picture.
5. close the binder and make sure that it's not taut. The binder is there to keep the fork in place. It is not meant to bear the load. The load bearing portions of the wedged area and the rear upper side of the fork that's against the bottom of your bucket

Notes:

Do not tilt the bucket back when raising anything, the item being lifted could roll over the bucket and back towards the operator, and could be dangerous and even fatal.
