

A gar is part alligator, part

Steve Barclay (left) and Sam Lovell shot this 200-pound alligator gar in the Trinity River halfway between Dallas and Houston.

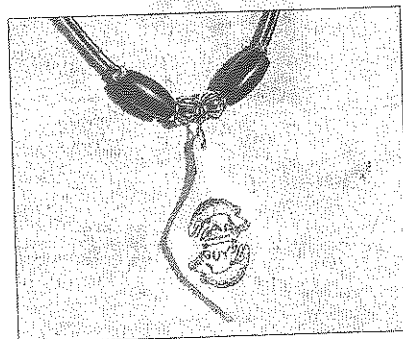

The Gar Guys have a specialized airboat built for a stable, go-anywhere shooting platform.

An alligator gar has a double row of impressive teeth that it uses to catch any prey small enough to eat.

Sam Lovell puts an insurance arrow into a big alligator gar on the Trinity River.

Large gar scales are made into jewelry like this necklace bearing the Gar Guys logo.
